I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:

Not only is Christmas Eve in the workplace understaffed and stressful - year after year it is a time where employees trying to be the best employee that they can be within their organisation willingly or unwillingly sacrifice Christmas Eve with their family to be as optimistic as possible when spending this traditional evening with their co-workers and often-stressed customers. Many employees are unable to take the evening off during this period - either they are contractually obliged to attend in accordance with their roster due to a "block out period" over the season or the organisation deems themselves as unable to have functional operation without their presence. Although workers are compensated for their time with standard pay-rates, there is no compensation provided for the important time missed with family, relatives that have travelled far distances and are perhaps rarely seen, memories that are made or the negative ramifications the following day, on Christmas, from working late the night before. Workers are often compensated with pay allowances in the workplace, a common example would be the fridge or freezer allowance. Employees are compensated hourly at a small rate for the physical discomfort of working within the cold for extended periods of time. If workers can be compensated for negative physical consequences of the job, should they not be compensated for negative emotional consequences? Christmas Eve in the workplace can and should be a justifiably uplifting experience for all.

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:

I have always celebrated Christmas Eve as it is a Danish tradition and it means a lot to me to spend it with family and friends. Two years in a row they have tried to make me work on Christmas Eve even if it was my RDO. I have to fight for my rights every year. Unfortunately this year I’ll have to work Christmas Eve as it is my day on. Greed is more important than Christmas spirit. It is clear when I talk to team members and customers, that a lot of people celebrate Christmas Eve these days and spent it with their family and friends.

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated public holiday because:

I am a mum of 3 kids and I want to spend the day cooking and prepping for Xmas lunch. Being a catholic I also go to mass at 7:00 pm which is the whole point of Xmas. I can’t go to mass on Xmas morning because I need to be up early to get turkey etc in the oven. No one shops much on Xmas eve at supermarkets after lunchtime any way. We work hard to help frazzled mothers and as a mum I need time to enjoy the season. Are politicians working Xmas eve I think not.

It's difficult to hear and watch the amount of people tell me earlier in day or few days before how excited they spending time with family or other loved ones, especially when I can't. I have a young child so why is this fair? The amount of times I've missed out on celebrations or going away is disheartening! Yes I chose to work in retail but still it doesn't come off as fair! Big businesses as local council is closed why? As THEY get to spend QUALITY time with their loved ones.. and every year I had to say sorry to my son and other family members sorry I HAVE to work..

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:

Christmas Eve brings friends together in celebration; family moments with children exuding excitement before bedtime and special family traditions shared ONLY on Christmas Eve (playing special games or preparing for Christmas day or opening a special gift or many other shared activities). Our family, traditionally had a Christmas Eve party for people we knew would be without family on Christmas. Year after year, the numbers grew. Had I been working Christmas Eve, we all would have very different memories of Christmas holidays! Those working Christmas Eve are missing out on the celebrations of this holiday season and the time can't be replaced or repeated. The night before Christmas IS a holiday night. Please, give everyone to experience it as a holiday night and create our traditions and special Christmas Eve moments. And if one MUST work Christmas Eve, then please, compensate these workers appropriately. Missing out on seeing young children on Christmas Eve is worth more than the average daily time rate. It is priceless!

We deserve as many days off as the bloody banks get, and if it falls on one of our rostered days on, we should get the next Monday off. Just like those scum bankers and move the public holidays around constantly like they do.

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:
Having the opportunity to spend what little time off over the holiday period is always a welcome idea for those who do not wish to spend Christmas eve in retail.

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:

We need a good work/life balance to achieve goals and be happy.
A public holiday would give us the option enable us to have a choice.

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:
Retail staff already miss out on so much precious time with Family over the Christmas and New year period due to all the extended trading hours. Christmas Eve is just as important.

I think it's a time family should be together but if they have to work a shift they should be awarded penalty rates to compensate being away from family members.

I want Christmas Eve to be a legislated a public holiday because:

I want to be able to spend it with my family & to be able to join in with the festivities. I believe that we should be granted this as we work so many more long hours leading up to Christmas so we deserve that break on Christmas Eve or at least the appropriate pay if we cannot celebrate it like others.

Thankyou
